Short outline

Introductory course to the study of politics from a gender perspective and to the analysis of gender equality policies

Requirements

Knowledge of written and spoken English

Aims

The course aims at familiarizing students with the study of politics from a gender perspective. This includes an understanding of what are the major contributions of feminist theories to the analysis of politics in general and gender equality policies in particular.

Competencies

1. Learning how to apply a gender perspective to the analysis of politics
2. Understanding gender equality policies, actors, strategies, and issues

Contents

Key concepts and theories for studying politics from a gender perspective. Political actors: feminist movements, equality institutions. The analysis of gender equality policies: strategies, institutions, instruments, and issues. Women's political representation.

This course is structured into 4 issues. The first issue offers an introduction to the main concepts of a feminist analysis of politics and the main feminist theories of the state. The second theme examines gender equality policies. This includes exploring the framing of gender equality policies and the main current political strategies used in policymaking (equal opportunities, positive actions, gender mainstreaming, and intersectionality). The third issue introduces the main actors in gender equality policies, that is feminist movements and equality institutions, and analyzes the institutionalization of equality in the contexts of Spain and the European Union. The fourth theme focuses on the study of women's political representation and gender quotas.

Work methodology

The methodology of work includes theory lectures and students' active participation through oral presentations, written essays, reports and debates based on the syllabus' readings. Using the virtual campus is crucial for the course.

Assessment

The assessment will take into account students' work within and outside the class. This includes: critical reports on the readings, oral presentations, written essays, and an exam at the end of the course that will cover all the themes discussed in the theory and practical lectures, as well as all compulsory readings. The exam grade will count for 40% of the final grade. The grade of the reading reports, oral presentations, and essays will count for 60% of the final grade.
